

Poison Gas Laid To Egypt Planes

Aden, July 20 (AP) — Egyptian bombers loosed deadly phosgene gas on Hajjah, a Yemeni royalist religious center, last Saturday killing 150 persons and sending 350 others to hospital, usually reliable sources said today.

A colorless poison gas that attacks the respiratory system, phosgene was used along with mustard gas by both sides in World War I.

Yemeni royalists fighting the republican regime have repeatedly charged the Egyptians use poison gas against them. The International Red Cross Committee confirmed in Geneva last month that a Yemeni village was hit by poison gas but did not identify the attackers.
